NORTH SHORE HEALTH DEPARTMENT

Did You Know?

May 8-14 is the fourth annual United Nations Road Safety Week. The week focuses on speed and what can be done to address this key risk factor for road traffic deaths and injuries. According to the World Health Organization, road traffic injuries are estimated to be the ninth-leading cause of death across all age groups globally, and are predicted to become the seventh-leading cause by 2030.

Evidence shows that the key solutions for managing speed include:

- establishing and enforcing speed limit laws
- building or modifying roads to include features to limit speed
- installing technologies in vehicles
- raising awareness about the dangers of speeding as well as the actual speed limit on each road

The NSHD is engaged in efforts to reduce motor vehicle crashes on our area roadways. Specifically, a grant the department received from Safe Kids Worldwide will focus on making improvements to increase pedestrian and bicycle safety in Shorewood. These improvements will include improved signage to alert motorists of speed limits in school zones.

May 6-12, 2017 is also National Nurses Week. We appreciate the work our Public Health Nurses do every day to keep the North Shore healthy and safe. Nurses Week is a great opportunity to take the time to celebrate. We support all nurses in this year's theme of becoming healthier in mind, body, and spirit. <http://www.nursingworld.org/nnw>.

Last week at the health department

Health Department staff attended Green Day in the Bay, where we shared information on the services that the health department provides. Throughout the summer, we will be sharing information at events in all seven communities, but you can read more about the health department at www.nshealthdept.org

Ann Christiansen, Health Director/Health Officer gave a lecture to public health graduate students from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee's Zilber School of Public Health. Her lecture focused on local health department experiences in applying a Health in All Policies approach to our initiatives.

Rachel Lecher, a public health graduate student working with the NSHD from the UWM Zilber School of Public Health, was selected to give an oral presentation at the College of Health Sciences' Health Research Symposium. Her presentation focused on her Capstone research evaluating physician clinic practices for blood lead level testing among children at high risk for lead poisoning. This work grew out of initial Field Placement with the NSHD.

Staff members met with local public health professionals for a Public Health Caucus meeting of the SE WI Healthcare Emergency Readiness Coalition (HERC). HERC consists of 8 caucuses, including public health, hospital, emergency management, EMS, long-term care, and other healthcare-related groups in the nine counties of SE Wisconsin. Pooling resources and skills through HERC assures that our region is better prepared to respond to a major event that results in a large number of injured or ill patients.
