NORTH SHORE HEALTH DEPARTMENT

Did You Know?

November is Lung Cancer Awareness Month. Cigarette smoking is the number one cause of lung cancer, but use of other tobacco products also increases the risk. Although cigarette use is dropping among Wisconsin’s youth, other newer tobacco products are gaining popularity fast. And that’s not good, because there’s no such thing as a safe tobacco product. Designed to deliver nicotine—a highly addictive additive that can keep kids hooked for life—these new tobacco products come in a wide range of shapes and styles and are designed to mimic common candies and mints. Thirteen percent of Wisconsin high school students report using e-cigarettes, compared to 8 percent who use conventional cigarettes according to the 2016 High School Youth Tobacco Survey. Among those who use e-cigarettes, over 88 percent of high school teens say they wouldn’t try e-cigarettes if they weren’t flavored.

You don’t have to be an expert to talk to your kids about the dangers of tobacco use. Let your kids know how you feel about tobacco and make sure they have the facts they need to make healthy decisions on their own. Here are a few tips that can help:

Make it personal: Most people who use tobacco want to quit. If you or someone you love has struggled with nicotine addiction or a tobacco-related illness, talk to your kids about it.

Focus on right now: Young people can have difficulty imagining long-term health effects, like cancer or lung disease. The immediate costs of tobacco use—shortness of breath, mouth sores, yellow teeth, and addiction—are much easier for them to relate to.

Talk about social costs: Nobody wants to smell bad, have yellow teeth and bad breath, or get red and itchy eyes. Encourage your child to think about the impact tobacco can have on first impressions.

Remember, tobacco-free is popular: There are so many tobacco products in stores and ads and YouTube videos, it’s easy for kids to believe that “everybody is doing it.” In fact, most Wisconsin youth have never used tobacco. Remind your kids that living tobacco free is the popular choice.

Ask them to ask: Make sure your child knows they can always ask you about tobacco products (instead of turning to Google, YouTube, or classmates and friends). You may not know everything, but you can find the answers together.

The Department of Health Services (DHS) has launched a campaign to inform parents about brightly packaged, candy-flavored tobacco products targeted to appeal to children. Learn more about the “Tobacco is Changing” campaign, including photos of the flavored products at:

Last week at the health department

A public health nurse did a book reading for first graders at the Brown Deer Elementary School. The health department received Clifford books from SafeKids to help promote pedestrian safety. The goal of the reading was to teach children how to safely cross the street and what safety rules should be followed.

The Health Director/Health Officer was interviewed by WTMJ radio about the risks of carbon monoxide poisoning and key prevention measures. Ms. Christiansen stressed the importance of having working carbon monoxide detectors on every floor in your home, along with taking precautions like having the furnace and wood-burning stove inspected annually, never running a propane heater or grill inside the house and never running a car in an enclosed space.

The Health Department conducted a communicable disease investigation surrounding a patient with mumps. The Department would like to remind residents that cases of mumps, measles, and other vaccine-preventable diseases are occurring, and that the best way to prevent them is by being fully immunized. Check your immunization record online at <https://www.dhfwir.org> and make sure you have received all doses of all recommended vaccinations.
