NORTH SHORE HEALTH DEPARTMENT

Did You Know?

Winter commonly brings coughs and colds. However, there are special cases where a cough may be due to more than "just a cold." Cold symptoms include a cough, sneezing, stuffy or runny nose and shortness of breath and usually last 7-10 days.

Some more serious medical conditions that can develop from a cold or other illness, or be confused for a cold include:

Pertussis ("Whooping Cough") begins with cold-like symptoms, but after 1-2 weeks, pertussis can cause violent and rapid coughing, over and over, until the air is gone from the lungs and a person is forced to inhale with a loud "whooping" sound. This extreme coughing can even cause vomiting and leaves a person very tired. Since 2010, cases of pertussis among children and teens have increased. Read more about pertussis at <http://www.cdc.gov/pertussis/about/signs-symptoms.html>.

Croup can be caused by a group of diseases, but is most commonly caused by a virus. The illness commonly is manifested in young children by a hoarse voice; dry, barking cough; a high-pitched whistling breath sound, and respiratory distress that develops over a brief period of time. Read more about croup at <http://www.mayoclinic.org/diseases-conditions/croup/home/ovc-20166699>.

Pneumonia is an inflammation of one or both lungs, usually caused by an infection. The symptoms are similar to cold symptoms, but they last longer and may also include chest pain, fatigue, fever, chills, and mental confusion (especially in the elderly). Read more about pneumonia at: <https://www.cdc.gov/pneumonia/>.

Influenza ("the flu") is different from a cold in that it usually comes on suddenly, and more intensely. In addition to cold symptoms, influenza symptoms can include fever, body aches, fatigue and headache. Most people who develop influenza recover within two weeks, but in some vulnerable populations (children, elderly, immune-compromised), the flu can result in hospitalization and even death. Learn more at:

<http://www.cdc.gov/flu/about/disease/index.htm>.

Most respiratory conditions (other than the common cold) can be decreased or prevented by vaccination. These include the seasonal flu vaccine, pneumococcal, pertussis and Haemophilus Influenza B (HIB).

Last week at the health department

The Health Department wrapped up a semester of hosting UW-Milwaukee student nurses in their community health clinical rotation. A group of 11 students looked at the built environment in the North Shore, comparing school and business intersections on the basis of walkability, bikeability, and general safety. They presented their findings and will also be providing a written summary.

The Public Health Manager attended a meeting of BEST (Breastfeeding Employer Supported Time). The Health Department is partnering with Milwaukee County Breastfeeding Coalition and the African American Breastfeeding Network on a grant from the Kellogg Foundation to increase breastfeeding support in Milwaukee County workplaces.

The Public Health Manager attended the Exercise Design Committee meeting for Region 7 of the Healthcare Emergency Readiness Coalition. Part of keeping our communities safe involves exercising our preparedness capabilities with other responders, such as fire departments and hospitals. This group is planning for two regional major exercises in 2017—one involving an airplane crash and one running a mass meningitis vaccination clinic.
